No other UU organization has a regular presence on Capitol Hill! It's up to us UUs in the national capital region to Step up! Show up! and Speak up!

The UUSJ Capitol Hill Advocacy Corps members are volunteers from congregations in the greater Washington, DC area committed to taking UU values and views on social justice issues to members of Congress and their staff. We advocate, gather information and build relationships in order to communicate effectively our concerns on economic justice, environmental and climate justice, immigration reform and defending our democracy.

The Advocacy Corps visits Capitol Hill offices on the morning of the second Tuesday of every month. We deliver constituent letters from partner congregations from around the country. For more information and in preparation for the Information Session see our video and Q&As about the Advocacy Corps.
